FINCANTIERI: ARGENTINE NAVY INTERESTED IN ACQUIRING UP TO THREE FCX20 CORVETTES

The interest was formalized within the framework of the Letter of Intent signed in Rome by the Defense Ministers of Italy and Argentina

The Argentine Navy has expressed its interest in acquiring up to three FCX20 corvettes developed by Fincantieri, in full configuration and including an Integrated Logistic Support (ILS) package. The interest was formalized yesterday in Rome with the signing of a Letter of Intent (LoI) by the Defense Ministers of the two countries.

Fincantieri was represented at the signing by Pierroberto Folgiero, CEO and Managing Director, and Eugenio Santagata, General Manager of the Naval Vessels Division.

In this context, Fincantieri will be able to bring to the Argentine Navy its extensive know-how in the design, construction and support of high-technology naval vessels, contributing to the potential development of the program throughout its different phases.

The agreement also envisages the possibility of exploring further opportunities for cooperation in the naval sector, including the potential acquisition of naval vessels currently in service.

The FCX20 corvettes developed by Fincantieri reflect the Group's technological and industrial expertise in the design and construction of complex naval vessels and represent a reference platform within Fincantieri's naval offering for international markets.

Pierroberto Folgiero, CEO and Managing Director of Fincantieri, commented: "This agreement confirms the strategic value of Italian shipbuilding as a driver of international cooperation and a key asset for the country's industrial presence on global markets. Argentina's interest in our platforms opens up a long-term perspective for cooperation, built on the ability to combine industrial excellence, innovation and cooperation among institutions, Armed Forces and industry. For Fincantieri, this represents a further opportunity to translate this distinctive industrial heritage into strategic partnerships in international markets, strengthening the Group's position as a global benchmark in the sector."
